Case No. 2:25-cv-00494-CDS-MDC

22 These are a collection of removed Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) cases
23 brought by the named plaintiffs against defendant Portfolio Recovery Associates, LLC. In each 24 case, Portfolio Recovery filed a motion to dismiss for failing to state a claim, which all the 25 plaintiffs oppose. Each individual plaintiff filed a motion to remand. Portfolio Recovery opposed 26 each motion. I referred these motions to United States Magistrate Judge Maximiliano Couvillier

1 for a report and recommendation (R&R). On May 29, 2025, Judge Couvillier issued an R&R
 2 recommending that I grant the plaintiffs' motions to remand, deny as moot the defendant's 3 motion to dismiss, or alternatively, for a more definite statement, and—to the extent the 4 defendant's opposition included what was construed as a countermotion to dismiss for lack of 5 standing—that the countermotion be denied as moot. See R&R, ECF No. 26 at 10–11.<sup>1</sup> The R&R
 6 makes two primary determinations: (1) that this court lacks subject matter jurisdiction and (2) 7 that the cases should be remanded. Id.

8 On June 13, 2025, Portfolio Recovery filed an objection to the R&R in each case, which 9 the plaintiffs oppose. Obj., ECF No. 30; Resp., ECF No. 31. Finally, on July 10, 2025, the plaintiffs 10 filed a motion for leave to file supplemental authority in support of their motions to remand and 11 responses to the defendant's objection. Mot., ECF No. 33.<sup>2</sup> Portfolio Recovery opposes the 12 motion. Opp'n, ECF No. 34.

13 For the reasons set forth herein, I overrule Portfolio Recovery's objection to the R&R, 14 affirm and adopt the R&R, and modify it to incorporate the analysis below. Accordingly, 15 Portfolio Recovery's motions to dismiss or for a more definite statement are denied, plaintiffs' 16 motions to remand are granted, and the construed motion to dismiss for lack of standing filed by 17 Portfolio Recovery in opposition to the motion for remand is denied in each action. I also deny 18 the plaintiffs' motions for leave to file supplemental authority.

19 I. Legal Standard

20 “Any party wishing to object to a magistrate judge's findings and recommendations . . .
 21 must file and serve specific written objections with supporting points and authorities.” LR IB 3-22 2(a). When a party timely objects to a magistrate judge's R&R, the court is required to “make a 23 de novo determination of those portions of the [R&R] to which objection is made.” 28 U.S.C. §

24 _____
 25 <sup>1</sup> For ease, I only cite docket numbers issued in case number 2:25-cv-00467-CDS-MDC, as that is the lowest case number. The same motions and the same R&R were docketed in each action.

26 <sup>2</sup> This is the corrected version of the filing. In each case, the court only considered the corrected image of the motion to file supplemental authority, but for ease of resolving the pending motions, the original docket number is included in the conclusion of this order.

1 636(b)(1). The court “may accept, reject, or modify, in whole or in part, the findings or 2 recommendations made by the magistrate.” Id.

3 II. Discussion

4 As a threshold matter, I deny the plaintiffs’ motion for leave to file supplemental 5 authority. ECF No. 33. I agree with the defendant that the “supplemental authority,” which is 6 just the minutes from a motions calendar, neither explains the issues raised in the summary
7 judgment motions, nor does it provide any explanation or analysis as to why the plaintiff’s 8 summary judgment motion should be granted and the defendant’s countermotion should be 9 denied. See Pl.’s Ex. A, ECF No. 33-1. Accordingly, a minute order, without more, is neither 10 persuasive nor helpful, so the motion for leave is denied.

11 Portfolio Recovery’s objections to the R&R lie squarely with Judge Couvillier’s 12 recommendation that these actions be remanded back to state court. See ECF No. 30. It first 13 argues that because Judge Couvillier found that the plaintiffs lacked Article III standing, it was 14 incorrect for him to remand the cases instead of dismissing them because remand is futile: the 15 complaints suffer the same lack of injury-in-fact in state court. Id. at 6. Portfolio Recovery also 16 argues that there is standing, conceding that the plaintiffs’ complaint is “almost entirely bereft of 17 factual allegations, the threadbare Complaint does emphasize at the outset the purported harms 18 caused by FDCPA violations, including ‘bankruptcies, marital instability, the loss of jobs, and 19 invasion of individual privacy,’” id. at 9 (citing ECF No. 1-1), while simultaneously arguing that 20 Judge Couvillier erred in finding that the plaintiffs did not properly allege an injury-in-fact. Id. at 21 8.

22 Plaintiffs respond that the R&R should be affirmed in full because this action was 23 improperly removed; the plaintiffs are only seeking statutory damages, not actual ones. See Resp., 24 ECF No. 31 at 3. Plaintiffs further argue that the defendant removed these actions in bad faith
25 because there was no Article III standing at the time they were removed, which the defendant 26 knew but removed anyway. Id. at 4–9. Last, plaintiffs argue that Portfolio Recovery failed to 1 show “with absolute certainty” that their cases would be dismissed for lack of standing if 2 remanded. Id. at 9–11.

3       Having conducted a de novo review, I overrule Portfolio Recovery’s objection. First, I 4 find that Judge Couvillier was correct in finding that the plaintiffs have no Article III standing.
5 As there is a strong presumption against removal jurisdiction, it is Portfolio Recovery’s burden 6 to demonstrate removal is proper. See Gaus v. Miles, Inc., 980 F.2d 564, 566 (9th Cir. 1992) (“The 7 ‘strong presumption’ against removal jurisdiction means that the defendant always has the 8 burden of establishing that removal is proper.” (citations omitted)). Portfolio Recovery fails to 9 meet this burden because its objection offers nothing more than mere insistence that Article III 10 standing exists. There is no dispute that to establish standing a plaintiff “must have suffered an 11 injury-in-fact—an invasion of a legally protected interest which is (a) concrete and 12 particularized . . . and (b) actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical.” Lujan v. Defs. of 13 Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992) (internal citations omitted). Indeed, injury-in-fact is the “[f]irst 14 and foremost of standing’s three elements.” Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 338–39 (2016)
15 (quoting Steel Co. v. Citizens for Better Env’t, 523 U.S. 83, 103 (1998)) (alteration in Spokeo, Inc.).
16 While Portfolio Recovery asserts that the complaint is “almost entirely bereft of factual 17 allegations” and is “threadbare,” see ECF No. 30 at 9, it also confusingly argues that the 18 complaint’s statement that bankruptcies, marital instability, the loss of jobs, and invasion of 19 individual privacy,” is sufficient to demonstrate an injury-in-fact. ECF No. 30 at 9 (citing ECF 20 No. 1-1 at ¶ 1). But this general statement about the possible alleged harms stemming from debt 21 collection practices is neither concrete nor particularized as not one plaintiff asserts that they 22 have suffered any of these harms. See Spokeo, Inc., 578 U.S. at 339 (stating that a particularized 23 injury “must affect the plaintiff in a personal and individual way”) (internal citation omitted).
24 Arguing that plaintiffs have Article III standing while also essentially arguing that the

1 complaints lack an injury-in-fact is not only a fallacy,<sup>3</sup> but an unsuccessful attempt to dismiss 2 these cases in federal court while trying to circumvent the basic requirement to properly remove 3 an action to federal court, which includes Article III standing. Thus, if the plaintiffs seemingly 4 fail to establish an injury-in-fact in their complaints<sup>4</sup> when they were filed in state court, thus 5 making dismissal, not remand, appropriate here, then it was improper to remove the cases to 6 begin with because there was no standing from the start. But the court need not resolve this 7 circular argument because both the Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit have consistently held 8 that remand is the appropriate remedy once it is established that a plaintiff lacks Article III
 9 standing. See ASARCO Inc. v. Kadish, 490 U.S. 605, 617 (1989) (“Remand is the correct remedy
 10 because a failure of federal subject-matter jurisdiction means only that the federal courts have no 11 power to adjudicate the matter. State courts are not bound by the constraints of Article III.”);
 12 Polo v. Innoventions Int’l, LLC, 833 F.3d 1193, 1196–98 (9th Cir. 2016) (holding that 28 U.S.C. § 13 1447(c) requires remand of “the case” to state court “[i]f at any time before final judgment it 14 appears that the district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction,” compelled remand to state
 15 court when the plaintiff lacked Article III standing in district court but could have had standing
 16 to pursue those claims in state court.); Davidson v. Kimberly-Clark Corp., 889 F.3d 956, 970 n.6 (9th 17 Cir. 2018) (holding that “[as] a general rule, if the district court is confronted with an Article III 18 standing problem in a removed case—whether the claims at issue are state or federal—the 19 proper course is to remand for adjudication in state court”).

23 <sup>3</sup> See Obj., ECF No. 30 at 3 (“The Complaint alludes to harms from FDCPA violations including ‘invasion
 24 of individual privacy,’ and Plaintiff references ‘sensitive financial details’ disclosed to an unauthorized 25 third-party mail vendor.” (emphasis added)); id. at 8 (“By originally filing this action in Nevada state 26 court, which requires the same showing of standing as federal courts under Article III, Plaintiffs necessarily alleged they have suffered injury-in-fact, regardless of the relief sought.”).

<sup>4</sup> Obj., ECF No. 30 at 9 (“[I]t is illogical to conclude that each of the 20 Plaintiffs, all of whom were motivated to retain counsel and file suit, did not contend that they suffered an injury-in-fact from PRA’s alleged conduct.”).

1 Second, Portfolio Recovery fails to demonstrate with absolute certainty that its actions 2 would be dismissed if remanded to state court. Judge Couvillier correctly determined that the 3 “FDCPA gives plaintiffs a right and provides a statutory vehicle to vindicate that right” and that 4 “appears to be precisely the minimum requirements for standing under Nevada law, and 5 Portfolio does not show otherwise.” See ECF No. 26 at 9–10. Indeed, Congress authorized 6 citizens to vindicate their rights under the FDCPA in either federal or state court. See 15 U.S.C.
 7 § 1681p; see also Soto v. Great Am. LLC, 2018 WL 2364916, at *5 (N.D. Ill. May 24, 2018) (“[T]his 8 means that a state court potentially has jurisdiction over a federal statutory violation in an 9 instance where a federal court does not . . .”). NRS 649.370 explicitly states that violations of 10 the FDCPA or its regulations are considered violations of Nevada’s Chapter 649. That statute 11 states that “[a] violation of any provision of the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, 15
 12 U.S.C. §§ 1682 et seq., or any regulation adopted pursuant thereto, shall be deemed to be a 13 violation of this chapter.” Nev. Rev. Stat. § 649.370.

14 Further, as relevant here, the FDCPA itself provides for statutory damages in certain 15 circumstances. See 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a) (a plaintiff may recover statutory damages up to $1,000 16 for individual actions and additional damages in class actions.). While NRS 649.370 does not 17 expand upon or modify these federal remedies, it does incorporate FDCPA violations into 18 Nevada law. Thus, even when a plaintiff lacks standing to assert a FDCPA right in federal court, 19 this does not preclude the plaintiff from asserting that same right in state court, assuming the 20 state court’s potentially more lenient justiciability requirements together with authorization to 21 pursue such claims are authorized. Miranda v. Magic Mountain LLC, 2018 WL 571914, at *3 (C.D.
 22 Cal. Jan. 25, 2018) (“While it may strike some as nonsensical that a state court has jurisdiction 23 to adjudicate a federal claim when a federal court does not, this is in fact a notable quirk of the 24 United States federalist system.”). The leniency of Nevada’s statutory standing requirements is 25 properly addressed in the R&R. See ECF No. 26 at 9 (citing Nat’l Ass’n of Mut. Ins. Co. v. State Dep’t of that “statutory standing in cases where the Legislature has created a right and provided a statutory vehicle to vindicate that right that relaxes otherwise applicable standing requirements”) and Ferguson v. LVMD, 364 P.3d 592, 600 (Nev. 2015) (“Nevada has a long-standing history of recognizing statutory rights that are broader than those afforded to citizens by constitutional standing.” (internal quotations and citation omitted))). And Portfolio Recovery’s argument is even less persuasive given the procedural history of this case. Portfolio Recovery promptly removed each action to federal court, prior to any attempt or motions practice related to amending the complaints. Should there be any pleading defect, the plaintiffs could potentially amend under Nevada’s less stringent notice-pleading standard.<sup>5</sup> See Nutton v. Sunset Station, Inc., 2015 Nev. App. LEXIS 4 (Nev. 2015) (“Nevada is a ‘notice pleading’ state, which means that the ultimate facts alleged within the pleadings need not be recited with particularity . . . , much less supported by citations to evidence and testimony within the pleading . . .”). But this issue is one properly resolved by the state courts.

Accordingly, the report and recommendation of the magistrate judge properly determined that remand, not dismissal, is appropriate here. Based on a de novo review of the factual allegations, I agree with the conclusions of the R&R and find that this court lacks subject matter jurisdiction and the cases should therefore be remanded. Therefore, Portfolio Recovery’s objection to the R&R is overruled in each action.

III. Conclusion

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the following objections are OVERRULED:

<sup>5</sup> The same reasoning defeats Portfolio Recovery’s futility argument. While this court does not disagree that the complaint contains limited allegations, it is far from clear at this juncture if the state court would dismiss plaintiff’s claims.
